SCSC SPEECHES Tuesday, April 13, 1993

Winning Candidates Electorial Speeches

Despite initial appearances, "Better late than never" has not returned as the Underground's motto. The SCSC candidates' submissions to our free Election Supplement page could not be printed in the issue prior to the SCSC elections due to last minute contractual default by one of our larger advertisers. (We will also apologise again for the tardiness of the Women's Feature which was delayed for the same reason.)

Nevertheless, believing in this free service the Underground offers to the candidates annually, and in the necessity of an elected official's accountability to the public, we promised to print the speeches of the winners once they were announced. Due to the process of appeals which are being used this year, "official" results are not yet fully available.

Although the success of appeals to UofT Administration remains to be determined (the Office of the Ombudsperson is now involved) SCSC has chosen to accept the elections on the recommendation of their Chair and Election Official Evelyne Gharibian-Singh.

Being the last issue of the year we have decided to print the speeches of the candidates successful in achieving positions which are not being contested. The position of SCSC President is currently claimed by Pina Palma and contested by Hans Cespedes Wittig, as such neither Palma nor Cespedes' submission will appear.

"Power To The People"

Isn't it about time that you took an honest look at your miserable life. Do something for yourself, Vote Luke!

I will be representing all 3rd year students at SCSC meetings and I will also be working as an assistant for my running mate Elmer on the communications commission. If any 3rd year student (3rd year means currently in 2nd year) disagrees with any facet of SCSC, I will be more than willing to listen to you and your recommendations.

However, I'd like to encourage you all to participate in SCSC events. For a start - Let's Vote!

Who is the "Dream Team"?!?

The United States had their NBA 'Dream Team,' Russia had their 'Team Select,' now meet Scarborough's own 'Dream Team' ... Susie Lee and Marilyn Tom, who are running for the positions of 2nd Year Reps!

So, on March 10 and 11, follow your dreams and 'do the right thing'!

YOUR BEST CHOICE FOR 2ND YEAR REPRESENTATIVES!!!

Attention First Year Students!!!

Do you crave fun and excitement? Do you want to be kept informed of what is going on around campus? Do you feel you should be able to voice your opinion on policies concerning you, the student? If these are questions you find yourself asking, then it is time to do something about it. One sure-fire way to achieve this goal is to vote the best representatives into office on SCSC. By voting for Jason Adams and Ross Holder as second year reps, you are ensuring that your representatives will have the experience , determination and commitment to get the job done right.

Thanks for the support.

Manika Karmakar running for 3rd year rep. on SCSC. I have had previous experience from working on the student council for 2 years in high school as well as being a mem ber of the communications commission during my 1st year at UofT. And on the Social Comm. this year. Also helped at orientation, worked on the Underground newspaper, and many productions put on by SCDC during the past 2 years. I am hard-working and willing to devote my time and energy to helping the students at Scar. College and promise only one thing - to do the best job I am able to.

A WORD FROM YOUR FUTURE SERVICES COMMISSIONER

First of all, for those of you who don't know me yet, my name is Ted Supelov and I am currently the deputy commissioner of part-time students.

I would like to thank all the students that supported me in my quest to become the services commissioner for the upcoming 1993/94 academic year. As your new commissioner I will do my best to ensure that the services SCSC currently offer are run in a more efficient manner next year. As well, I plan to introduce new services that will increase accessibility and accommodate students needs.

However, since the position was acclaimed, I will need your support once again come election day. ...

My name is Kym Haynes and I'm running for the position of Academic Commissioner. As academic commissioner it would enable me to do activities which would most positively benefit the students of Scarborough College. As your academic commissioner I would raise awareness of the academic clubs. There are many students of which would join academic clubs if their clubs themselves made their options more available. These clubs hold many events that could be of great interest to many students, but because of the lack of communication, many students are not aware of such events. As your Academic Commissioner I will be a positive influence in bringing this awareness about.

I enjoy working with people. This is why I am seeking the position of Vice President of Administration for Student Council.

Issues that I feel strongly about include my support for the Walksafer and Ridesafer programs. I believe that these programs do work and should continue to work.

I also feel Scarborough pays SAC too much for the use of their downtown facilities. I will fight to get some money back for Scarborough because Scarborough money should be used directly for Scarborough.

I would like an opportunity to work with the Underground and SCAA. By working together, I feel that we can promote Scarborough better and by doing so the campus may earn the respect it deserves.

Greetings fellow peers! My name is not Elmer Fudd or Elmer the Elephant BUT Elmer Chan and I am running for position of Communications Commissioner. Along with my running mate, Luke Sultan-Khan (who is running for 3rd year rep), we are both striving to make you, the student body, significant. With you on my side, hopefully, a cup of innovation, combined with a dash of radicalism and a pinch of risk will be the proper recipe for you and me for greater unification and teamwork within Scarborough Campus. On March 10 & 11:

VOTE ELMER CHAN FOR COMMUNICATIONS COMMISSIONER!!!

Good day fellow friends and students:

My name is Beverlee Lambert and I am running for the position of Vice President of Finance of Scarborough College Student Council. As students in this day and age we are all faced with the challenge of surviving financially, therefore it is important that we receive maximum return from our dollar. This can only be done with accountable and responsible money management. Currently SCSC deals with over $200,000 of your money, it is for this reason why I feel it necessary to have an accountable and responsible student council, which works for and with you, not against.

As your V.P. Finance I will strive to provide a wide range of services...

Don't Believe The Hype

At some point in one's life a person arrives at a crossroad. The route he or she takes will reflect the person's ideals, beliefs and goals. A bit over a year ago I chose a specific direction by writing a controversial story and this year I continued further by offering my bid for the S.C.S.C. presidency.

In between I saw things happening in our council behind the scenes that concerned me greatly. Some of the things I reported and some I could never report. When one becomes aware of just exactly what the council does, you can't help but realize that the Scarborough students need the S.C.S.C. like a fish needs a bicycle.

I wanted to change this. I felt it was time to stop benefiting the few and start serving the many.

During the campaign, the Elections Committee censored my literature, threatened me and unauthorized me from speaking about my opponents record. I feel these actions affected what proved to be the closest Presidential race in recent memory.

Before I launched my appeals, some of my friends told me they supported me personally but could not do so publicly because they knew my battle had a predestined result due to bias and apathy. They did not wish to be part of a losing battle and suggested I simply give-up. What these people do not understand is that not all worthwhile battles are winning battles. Sometimes one must do what one believes to be legitimately right no matter what the odds are. To many, my actions seemed insignificant and drew numerous criticisms. I kept moving forward remembering what a young scholar wrote in his newspaper column at the University of Montréal in May of 1939: "It is wonderful to be despised, if, deep down, we know we are right." This person was answering backlash from students who criticized his nationalistic liberal political views during the Duplessis era -- His name was Pierre Elliot Trudeau. To all those who voted for me, for my ideals and for the changes I wanted to make I thank you and I also thank you for making the presidential race so close. I will at some point be back. Nothing and No one can defeat one's spirit.

Election Outcome Sent Off-Campus

The MANITOBAN (CUP)

After two weeks of campaigning, countless hours of UMSU committee meetings and 4700 cast votes, where is our new UMSU prez and VP?

Yet another committee is being formed to answer this question. This time, however, it will be comprised of non-UMSU members.

The Elections Committee was charged with presenting a recommendation to council February 11 on whether to ratify election results which declared the slate of Pollock and Wood as UMSU president and vice-president. Charges of misconduct and violation of electoral rules against the slate were left unresolved at the end of the meeting. What did result was a motion making the chair responsible for hiring three professional adjudicators to review all matters which came before the Electoral Committee.

According to council chair Allison Saunders, the motion gives the panel four possibilities. The panel must decide between ratifying the election results as they stand, disqualifying a slate or slates and ratifying the results as they remain, disqualifying a slate or slates and having a recast ballot or nullifying the election.

A working schedule for the panel will not be until they are hired, says Saunders.

Although one person has been hired, Saunders will not release the name to the public until all three adjudicators are found.

It was decided by council that UMSU will cover the cost of the adjudication with money from the executive budget.

"The amount is not set yet but obviously we'll keep our eye on costs and try and keep them down," says Saunders.

From what he knows of the likely adjudicators to be hired, Director of Finance Howard Almdal anticipates costs being kept under $10 000.

The terms of reference for the panel have yet to be specifically set, however Saunders says they will be reviewing everything that the Elections Committee did. Who will make presentations is also yet to be determined.

"We're envisioning some sort of oral response from various affected parties. What the exact format of that is, I don't know," says Saunders.

Of the council election process she says, "It's obviously flawed and needs to be changed."

SCSC accepts Elections, Administration Vote is Still Outstanding

by Jason Pasquale
Editor-in-Chief

Scarborough College Students' Council rejected the appeal of Hans Cespedes Wittig to invalidate the SCSC elections for the position of SCSC President in the upcoming 1993-94 Academic Year.

Last Tuesday Cespedes approached the current SCSC Board on the basis that SCSC violated many of its own Bylaws during the election. SCSC ruled that they had not and chose to uphold the elections.

Cespedes' options are now limited to UofT Administrative channels and the court system. Cespedes has not commented on the possibility of a lawsuit but is currently using the Office of the Ombudsperson in Administrative appeals.

Administration cannot force a new election but, if they decide SCSC violated its own Bylaws and/or operating on a level playing field, they could choose to cease acknowledging SCSC. If this happened SCSC risks not only endorsement from UofT but also their student levy.

Cespedes has also alleged that the election committee itself was biased against him. Evelyne Gharibian-Singh served as the Chief Returning Officer for the elections and hand-picked the remainder of the election committee from current SCSC members. As an SCSC official Gharibian voted to sue Cespedes last year, although later dropped by SCSC a second plaintiff joined and the case is yet to go to court.

C. Post Withdrew Sandi Parson is Safe

Canada Post withdrew from the Scarborough Campus location as planned last Tuesday. The former Post Office remains as a location from which incoming mail can be sorted and picked-up by the Scarborough Campus Community. Employee Sandi Parsons has indicated satisfaction with the altered job responsibilities.

Out-going mail can be dropped off in the mailbox located outside of the main S-wing doors near the circular drop-off entrance to the campus. Special orders are no longer available at Scarborough, necessitating a trip to an official Canada Post location.

Scarborough's Health Failing But GPA Still Alive

Student health often takes a dive just prior to finals. Everything from pneumonia to broken bones become near frequent occurences while traditional stress related ailments such as tension headaches, nausea, and cold sores, skyrocketed.

According to a number of professors this year has been particularly bad, resulting in more extensions than they ever remember granting before.

WalkSafer No More Have A Safe Summer

April 8 the Walksafer Program shut down for the summer. In leiu of this service escorts are available from Campus Police on a request basis.

We apologise for the lack of notice on this important safety issue, unaccountably the Underground does not seem to have been informed of the cessation of this important service. Steps are being taken to ensure such lack of notice does not happen again.

Health Services Shut Avoid Summer Colds

Look after yourself from here on in, because as of May 7 Scarborough Campus Health Services will no longer be available to hold your hand.

Load up on all the free samples and discount products you need (check expiry dates before use) and be sure to get any forms you will need throughout the summer.

Health Services will reopen for the new academic Winter Session in September.

Thanks be to...

It is said that all good things come to an end - I don't agree. Our staff this year endured through more than anyone could have asked, and most are coming back.

They survived what are normally phenomenal workloads made near impossible by staff shortages, the naturally resulting infighting, and the often strong personalities of those who remained. They even unanimously voted to forego their honorariums - token thanks as it is - to finance the purchase of a new computer that some of them will never see.

True to style almost all of them successfully ran for re-election. They were joined by other staff members to swell our ranks to one of the largest returning mastheads this paper has seen in years.

Less than perfect relations existed with various groups this year. We sincerely hope that this changes for the future. We've proved we can hold our own — next year we face a larger challenge, proving we can work together with others.

Thanks to all of our readers — it is you who justify what we do.

Thanks to all our contributors — it is you who make what we do possible.

Thanks to all our sources — without you we would just be a connection on campus.

Thanks to our supporting papers — your support has been invaluable.

Sincere thanks are due to many others, regrettably some we cannot name. They all know who they are and we wish them all to know we thank them with all our hearts. We wish you all well and hope, albeit somewhat selfishly, that we have the chance to work together again.

Thank-you,

Jason Pasquale

Robert McGavin,

As a student of UofT I am opposed to the proposed incidental fee hike.

I strongly believe that a motion of this nature must be brought to the students in the form of a referendum.

Please ensure that all the members of Governing Council are aware of these concerns before they vote; they represent not only my personal feelings but those of my peers as well.

What a Joke!!

As the year comes to an end I find myself relieved. Yet the relief comes not from the end of school but from the end of all the bullshit that happens in this school.

There will be no more political rigormirole to endure - I have had my fair share of it working for the newspaper. There will be no more complaints from SCSC or branches of admin about what 'does' and 'does not' get published. The power struggles I won't even get into.

Greatfully, the business/personal conflicts which afflict so many people of the campus will no longer have to be tolerated (I hate dealing with immature brats while trying to do business). This is one problem that students do not know how to solve. Hopefully they will before they step into the real world.

Backstabbing must be a course available at this campus because there are so many students that are proficient at it. This really makes me grind my teeth. I guess it goes hand in hand with the power games that I talked about before, who knows? All I know is that it occurs daily at this campus

Next year I hope everyone grows up. Being elected as the assistant editor means I am going to be subjected to all this shit again - there really is no need for it but I guess too many people think they are still in public school because they cry just the same.

Bourbon Tabernacle Choir is Good Enough To See Straight Up -- Superior Cackling Hen Lays No Egg

by Mike Morrow
Underground Contributor

The Bourbon Tabernacle Choir has been called an "ensemble" group because they play well together and feed off one anothers' energy. I don' t know if this term quite catches the essence of the performance at the Phoenix Concert Theatre last Thursday night. Personally, I would call it more like, oh, a "Hip-Happenin'-Late-Night-Soul-Groove" (said in a rich baritone voice).

The opening act was a relatively new Toronto band called Big Sugar. Their rhythm and blues/rock style was a perfect crowd starter. Their lively tunes warmed the crowd up to a bubblin' temperature. Chris Brown from the Bourbons joined Big Sugar on keyboards for a few sets.

The banner above the stage which read "One life is all. One body. Do. But do", set the tone for the Choir's show that evening. The carpe diem theme fit well with the band's quick paced and energetic performance. The message seemed to be if you did not come to party, get the hell out.

The Choir opened up with a cacophony of horns: big ones, small ones, short ones, and long ones. The horns soon moved off but the stage still seemed crowded with the eight piece ensemble.

Once the band started the stage seemed less crowded and more alive with action. Throughout the first couple of songs each member performed a solo in which all proved their stuff. No less than four members can sing lead vocals. Chris Brown and Dave Wall soon proved interchangeable as keyboardist Brown took over lead vocals from Wall. Both were equally talented in the other's position. The hand bill called the show an "ode to spring". Given the energy of the show, if this is spring, I can hardly wait for summer.

I managed to talk briefly to the band's drummer, Gregor Beresford, before the show. He said the band had been enjoying a cross-country tour but was happy to be back in Toronto. The tour was in support of the Choir's most recent release entitled Superior Cackling Hen . Beresford also said that the band's recent media attention has not altered the band's philosophy. When asked about the Canadian music scene and its inter-relatedness, Beresford commented that mutual admiration is responsible for musicians supporting each other on their various projects. Indeed, the Bourbons have made contributions on recordings by Big Sugar, Barenaked Ladies, and the Rheostatics.

If you feel like a party this summer, catch The Bourbon Tabernacle Choir wherever they play and whenever they play. This is one helluva live band!

Scarborough Art Students Display Their Wares

by Christine Sidlar
Underground Contributor

Editor's Note: Christine Sidlar's work was censored from the Juried Student's Show last year by person or persons unknown . To the best of the Underground's knowledge Administration has chosen to remain silent on this subject.

There actually seemed to be a bit of uncomfortableness surrounding the show amongst some of the artists in the studio this year; a lot of wondering why one or two other artists' paintings weren't also chosen to round out the show a little. Another concern was that, aside from the common motif of the human figure in all but one or two of the pieces, there was no underlying theme to the show; no attempt was made to convey a unified message. Still others felt that the works had a little too much in common; that only two distinct styles of painting, in particular, were exhibited.

The work hung inside the gallery was more varied, although I found it disappointing that more items from the print-making shop were not chosen. The one print which was hung, Breaking Surface by Paula Joiner, is one of the most gorgeous little prints I have ever seen, with its quiet command of colour and attention in the corner of the gallery. Another such work was Koto Sato's installation, Background, a pleasing combination of finger-drawing in sand, rice paper, bamboo and photography, with a sense of emotion about it, perhaps alluding to the role of women in Eastern and Asian societies.

Robert Segovia's series of five expressionistic paintings with latent themes of religion and death, captured first prize honours. His sense of composition, aesthetics and "significant form" (for all you Clive Bell fans!) is admirable, and the quality of his brushwork is full of immediacy and fury; the thick shiny black paint he uses (perhaps mixed with resin) in large quantities makes you want to touch the work and see if it is as sticky as it looks. The mastery of Franz Kline or Willem de Kooning seem to be influences in Segovia's work.

Another artist of the Students' Show who takes influence, this time from a Canadian figure of 1950's and 60's art, is Fiona Stewart. Her hanging of transparent photographs in front of the gallery window is quite reminiscent of Joyce Wieland's "totems": creations of stuffed mylar hanging in a vertical sequence.

Particularly interesting were Arthur Goombs' drawings in graphite and charcoal, as was his sense of humour in the titles: Ancestor #1, Grandma and Ancestor #2, Grandpa. His Coal Miners merited a Katherine Hawthorn Framing Award.

Also eye-catching was Muchun Chen's Intention a large "sketchy" drawing, showing his ability to render human figures and expressions with the most economy, a trait most commonly associated with someone like French Realist and caricaturist Honore Daumier.

Unfortunately, the Juried Students' Show is no longer be on display. However, for some further excitement, the Scarborough Senior Students' Show opens April 14th in the Meeting Place's Gallery until the 30th of the month.

Jellyfish Won't Be Crying Over Spilt Milk

by Robin Dwarka
Underground Staff

With the release of the Beatle-esque The King is Half Undressed three years back, newcomers Jellyfish made an instant fan out of me. Their 1990 debut LP Bellybutton showcased the band's uncompromising '70's glam-rock image (somewhere between Shirley Partridge and Ziggy Stardust), and -- more importantly -- their sugar/lsd coated pop, drawing heavily from the sounds of Brian Wilson, Lennon, McCartney, Freddy Mercury and Pete Townsend. You couldn' t help but think Jellyfish might sound more at home on an old eight track car stereo.

To those of us willing to forgive the band's brutally nostalgic appearance, Bellybutton unveiled the strong songwriting/arranging talents of frontmen Andy Sturmer (drums and vocal) and Roger Manning (guitars), through ten original songs; including The King is Half Undressed and Baby's Coming Back, both of which might have charted top ten had they been released twenty years ago.

Though the debut album and a subsequent tour gained Jellyfish critical raves on both sides of the Atlantic, the general public was not amused. Only college radio picked up the band's sound across North America.

Three long years have passed since Bellybutton's release, and judging from the quality of Jellyfish's new album Spilt Milk, the boys have spent much of this time in a recording studio. At times the album seems almost overproduced, however, the magic of Sturmer and Manning's creations manages to shine through.

Gems include The Ghost at Number One (which is currently climbing the charts in Canada)- a Beach Boys influenced tribute to the record industry; Hush, a sweet lullaby; Sebrina Pastes and Plato, reminiscint of Sesame Street; and Russian Hill, which makes one think of a summer Sunday's drive.

It all fits together to make Spilt Milk a very good album with the potential to go top 30 and make modest stars of the its creator. If you like thick and heavy harmonies, and the good side of '60's and '70's pop (unrepresented on the hot 100 today), then Spilt Milk and Jellyfish are for you.

Early Sun Also Rises

by Mike Morrow
Underground Contributor

Last Wednesday night the Toronto music industry was treated to an eight song set from Neil Rook's debut release The Early Sun . The Ultrasound on Queen St. West hosted the event. The band went on early (sometime just after seven) due to the press-only showing.

Neil Rook's new release has been labelled a mix of rock, pop and folk with a slight taste of country. All these elements are blended smoothly enough so that no one element rises to dominance. The recording of Early Sun is much more polished and mixed than Rook's live performance, his live voice range leaving much to be desired. His facial expression while singing on stage is rather monotonous as well (he seems to have a fixed grimace).

The lyrics on Early Sun are definitely worth listening to and made the evening more enjoyable. Rook is the sole songwriter on this release. The political and social comments expressed in the songs are relevant and solidly written.

Neil Rook presented some of the more rock-orientated numbers from this first release of his. He opened the show dressed in a black leather jacket and jeans with the tune Too Late to Be a Hero. Rook's backup band, The Have-Nots, consist of guitarists Michael Paul Morneau and William Kingswood as well as a hired drummer, saxophonist, trumpet player and another guitarist. The band proved itself to be a tight outfit on the first few songs and remained consistent throughout the evening. A good deal more could have been done with the small horn section.

Rook's second number, 15 Restless Virgins was dedicated to Billie Holiday and is to be the second song released by the band. The first release was a song called Walkin' Backwards on My Knees; the video for which can now be seen on Much Music.

The press package information related that Neil Rook has "put his time in" his writing about poverty and abuse. It also states that he shrugs the more commercial aspects of the music business. "Commercial" is a relative term, often expressed by the musical demands of the public. Sorry Neil, but as evident by the existence of more than a few folk/rock/pop bands on the Canadian scene, I would label your debut attempt as "very commercial."

Exam Techniques You Can Count On

from the Underground, People Who Need What Help They Can Get

by Darlene Hearn
Life Editor

As a public service the Life section of the Underground would like to provide you with a few hints about successfully completing your final exams:

a) When preparing for an exam try to pick out the important points which will then serve as cues for recalling the remainder. Before embarking on a piece of revision self-test your recall of the important points and then check your accuracy. Don't panic if your initial accuracy is low —simply concentrate on the topic a bit harder.

b) Don't try to learn new material just before the exam since its learning may disturb previously remembered material by "retroactive inhibition." The short term memory is of use in the examination situation, e.g., for reproducing formulae, but some time must pass before more complex material is available for recall. It needs time to incubate.

c) If you must work the night before the exam—and some personalities must—then simply try to scan the material.

d) Get a good night's sleep before the exams if you can, but don't worry if you cannot—the loss of a night or two 's sleep does not impair mental efficiency unless you think it does.

e) Try to adjust mood on the morning of exams by reflections of the type that assert that when all is said and done it is only a test, that no one can be certain of success, that if you keep your wits about you it will be possible to make an attempt at almost anything that comes up, that you only need 4 out of 10 (or whatever it may be) to pass and so on.

f) If possible try to think about other things. Try to take pride in not getting into a "state".

g) Once in the exam room, read the instructions. Ask the invigilator if you don't understand.

h) Read all the questions carefully, twice. Make sure you understand what is being asked of you. Long questions are usually easier to answer. Don't be put off by of the questions at first sight. Some very easy questions look difficult on initial inspection.

i) Select the questions you will answer and divide up the time.

j) Remember, the examiner knows you are nervous, knows you are working against the clock, will not think you are a fool for making a few mistakes and does not expect you to submit an answer which will entitle you to a Nobel Prize.

k) Jot down a list of the important points that come into your mind as being relevant to the question you are about to answer. Other related material will then come to mind easily. Add it to the list. First thoughts are usually correct.

l) Read the question again. Eliminate all irrelevant points.

m) Subject the remainder to reasoning processes which will allow you to make deductions and elaborations to amplify your answer.

n) Divide the material into a beginning, a middle, and an end and write them all down legibly.

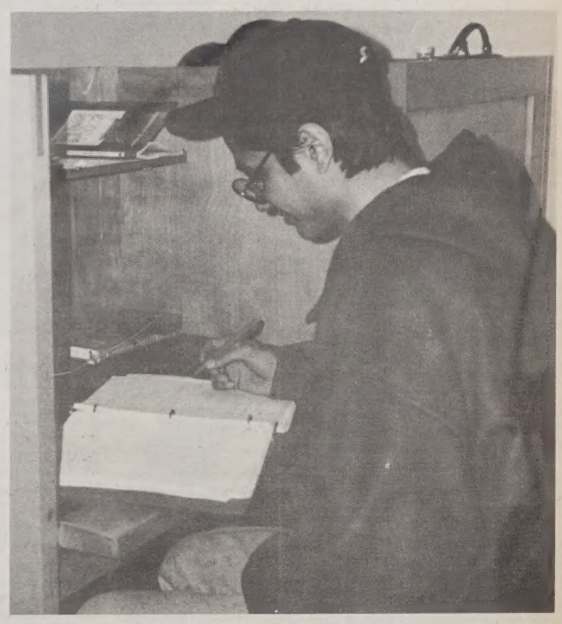
o) If you write reams you are not answering the question. Answer the question and only the question.

p) Proceed through the paper answering the required number of questions.

q) Write something, if only in note form, about all the questions you are required to answer.

r) Take no notice of the reactions of others to the paper. Just do your best and keep going.

s) If you should panic, or the mind seems not to work, turn the paper face down, sit back, breathe slowly and deeply, try to think of something totally different to the examinations. Resume work when you feel better or in five minutes. (which ever comes first)



t) Remember that if you keep your nerve when answering a really difficult paper you can often perform brilliantly well. Never give up. Be prepared to make guesses and take risks rather than write nothing at all. Be prepared to make guesses and take risks if necessary anyway.

u) GOOD LUCK!!!

Doubts?

And on the eighth day there came corruption ... but from the pure souls of all the single mothers receiving no allowance left behind by drunken irresponsible heathens came the idea for Acme to introduce a new and improved saviour for the suffering masses. His name: FRANZ.

His job: You may not have any problems yet, but you need him and its your damn pure soul that is calling for him in desperation.

INSTRUCTIONS

Pull cord and just sit back and enjoy the frivolous frolicking that ensues. Mass influenza may plague your friends and neighbours so please consult your family physician before starting. Missing money will soon be found. Cheques won't balance? He is your biggest asset.

And so the people were once again happy as they all pulled their own cords and wallowed in deep waves of pleasure as their problems washed away with help from our saviour, Franz.

Before You Went to University, You Wished You Had Known...

Before you went to University, you wished you had known...

- If free food is offered anywhere on campus it will be gone 10 minutes before it is served.
- Res. students share a collective consciousness where gossip is concerned.
- It's OK to drink before going to the Pub.
- Even if you scheduled your earliest class for the afternoon, you will still sleep through it.
- How early an assignment is assigned is irrelevant.
- Which are the bird courses.
- Not to trust the University employees.
- Course descriptions are the penultimate in advertising.
- That apathy is the way to go.
- That there is a 2 month waiting list for guidance appointments -- then they screw you over.
- How bad the cafeteria food is.
- How expensive the vending machines are.
- You will party the night before a final.
- Neither man nor woman can live by beer alone.
- Pasta will be your main source of sustenance.
- You can pass a test and know nothing.
- You can fail a test and know everything.
- Professors don't know it all.
- Every clock on campus reads a different time.
- You can know everything there is to know about your housemate, and still like him/her.
- Politicians begin young.
- Your doctor will believe anything.
- Friends are what makes University worthwhile.
- Carry a quarter for an emergency phone-call, carry a loonie in case you decide to keep the quarter.
- You would learn more outside your classes than in them.
- You can live for a week on less than $5.00.
- You can crash at some girl's house even when her boyfriend is upstairs. (Way to go Wes!!)
- You can love a lot of different people in a lot of different ways.
- Deadlines mean nothing.
- 5 minutes talking to your Prof. is equivalent to 2 hours of studying.
- The economic advantages of home-brew.
- Just exactly what the registrar means by compound interest.
- You can be registered in a class and not even know it.
- The benefits of caffeine, or, how to appreciate the hallucinogenic effects of sleep deprivation.
- The benefits of a College degree.

Why Do I Walk?

Why do I walk? 'Tain't no mystery
wanna have a good medical history,
Doctor told me walkin' is great -- helps them blood cells circulate,
great for the lungs,
great for the ticker,
can't nothin' getcha
in better shape quicker, feels so healthy, feels so sweet,
pumpin' my arms
and flappin' my feet, moldin'my muscles,firmin' my form,
pantin' like a pack mule,
sweatin' up a storm,
keeps me youthful,
keeps me loose,
tightens my timmy
and shrinks my caboose,
beats bein' sluggish,
beats bein' lazy -- why do I walk? Maybe I'm crazy!

BELIEVE

Stones are hard and cold
as the night
embraces the soul,
we throw them
to defend our stand and to justify our goals.

For Truth and Justice
I travelled the road less taken, fought and slayed
the beasts I had awakened

Today the fights have become subtle, but meaner
it is difficult to dtans strong-and be a Believer
